

Domestic abuse...

Why housing providers are the missing piece of the puzzle.

Domestic Abuse: Good Practice for Housing Providers

Why this course is important

If you work in housing, you may come into contact with victims of domestic abuse daily. This one-day course will help you to identify risk factors, even if you're not a domestic abuse specialist.

The course will teach you how to undertake a comprehensive risk assessment, implement an action plan and get individuals referred to the most appropriate services, including referral to Multi-Agency Risk Assessment Conferences (MARACs).

You'll also gain an understanding of the legal framework involved, plus the strategies used by different agencies so that everyone can work together to help victims and their children stay safe.

About the trainer

Gudrun ('Guddy') Burnet has attended a number of national conferences to deliver workshops and training on domestic abuse. She is a Community Safety Team Leader at Peabody, where satisfaction scores for domestic abuse case handling is 15 per cent higher than our average score.

You can contact Gudrun on 0207 021 4184, email gudrun.burnet@peabody.org.uk or through her website at www.gudrunburnet.com
